The International Office for Water provides technical support on request of private companies or local authorities. In this context, the Parchimy Company, a subsidiary of Eugène Perma Group, requested its know-how. The wish of this industrialist, who is producing cosmetics, was to make the effluent pretreatment reliable before its discharge into the domestic wastewater sewerage system of the Urban Community of Greater Reims.

IOWater thus conducted an on-site audit to establish the operating instructions and list a set of best practices for reliability and optimization of the facilities.

Consequently, the consumption of ferric chloride has been halved.

OWater then accompanies this client in its reliability approach regarding its wastewater treatment plant.
